1. Bores Nos. 64 to 67 of the Nagylengyel oilfield are in full production, giving a heavy oil with high bitumen content and only 2-3 per cent, while products. It is pumped through the pipes with 60-70 atmospheres. The piping has been under a test pressure of 90 atmospheres, as it is planned for operation at 60 atmospheres.
2. Simon Papp, the former manager of the Maort Oil Company which opened the Nagylengyel oilfield, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for sabotage, has now been released, and more or less restored to his former job. The reason for this is thought to be mismanagement of the oilfield, which he, as the expert, is expected to correct.
